

Paper Liner Recycling Program

Turn your label waste into something new

Avery Dennison has launched a recycling initiative for paper liner waste utilizing the recycling service offered by Fox River Fiber.

Under the joint program, paper liner waste can be recycled using responsible and reliable methods. It means end users can save on their usual waste costs, while also diverting waste from landfill or incineration, making the label supply chain more sustainable.

Quality Criteria

Any silicone paper liner waste, of any color, qualifies for our recycling program. It is preferred that liner waste is accumulated in gaylord boxes or bales. In cases where cores or edge trim contamination cannot be avoided, waste can still be recycled but into a lower quality grade. Incorrectly printed paper liners are also accepted.

- > High Quality Grade: properly sorted matrix without cores or edge trims
- > Low Quality Grade: paper liner waste with cores and/or edge trims

Cost Savings And Profits

Landfill and incineration disposal cost in the United States varies from $50 to $120 per ton, plus transport costs. By joining the Avery Dennison recycling program, converters can dispose of paper liner waste free of charge. In addition, waste materials meeting the highest quality grade are eligible for a rebate from $50 to $100 per ton. Transport can be arranged independently or via Fox River Fiber, with transport costs met by the converter. The end result is no disposal costs, with the opportunity for converters to benefit from additional income.

Environmental Benefits

Instead of being incinerated or disposed of in a landfill, paper liner waste is recycled into new, food grade FSC-certified pulp, with 80 percent of that pulp made into office paper.

This program aligns with Avery Dennison's commitment to sustainability and the company's public goal to eliminate 70 percent of matrix and liner waste from their supply chain by the year 2025.
